

Since 1936, the Wildlife Management Institute (WMI) has hosted the North American Wildlife and Natural Resources Conference. This prestigious gathering serves as the annual forum for setting conservation policy across North America.

The Conference brings together a diverse group of stakeholders, including:

- Administrators from federal, state, and provincial wildlife agencies
- Leaders from colleges, universities, and leading conservation organizations
- Managers, scientists, researchers, officials, and students of natural resources

Through a combination of plenary sessions, workshops, and over 150 separate meetings and functions, the Conference provides a platform for:

- In-depth discussions on critical conservation issues: Participants gain a deeper understanding of the origins, complexities, and potential solutions to current challenges.
- Fostering collaboration and cooperation: The Conference emphasizes the need for coordinated management of wildlife resources across the North American continent.
- Professional development: Attendees can learn from experts, exchange ideas, and network with colleagues.
